Snake Found on Something That Rhymes With 'Plane'

Transit officials say a 3-foot-long boa constrictor that slithered away from its owner on a Boston subway car a month ago has been found in an adjoining car. A commuter spotted Penelope, right, on Thursday and alerted a train attendant. Penelope's owner, 30-year-old Melissa Moorhouse, pictured with husband Ray Moorhouse, lost her pet between two stations Jan. 6. (AP)

Celebrating the Legacy of Reagan

Festivities help mark 100th birthday of enigmatic U.S. leader

Simi Valley, Calif.

Former first lady Nancy Reagan praised her late husband from the stage Sunday laying a wreath on his grave and singing "Happy Birthday" with the Beach Boys as actors, musicians, former advisers and friends paid tribute to Ronald Reagan on the 100th anniversary of his birth.

Nancy Reagan greeted the crowd of about 1,500 invited dignitaries under a tent on the east lawn of the Ronald Reagan Presidential Library in Simi Valley.

"I know that Ronnie would be thrilled," the 89-year-old said, looking skyward, "and is thrilled, to have all of you share in his 100th birthday. It doesn't seem possible, but that's what it is."

After the crowd, which included son Ron Reagan and former vice opresident Dick Cheney, rose to its feet in applause, she shouted, "Happy Birthday, Ronnie!"

Former Cabinet secretary and close Reagan friend James Baker III, and actor Gary Sinise were among many who spoke in praise of the Gipper.

"The Reagan Revolution did not end when he left office 22 years ago, or when he left Nancy and all of us on

Fitting Memorial

At the Washington federal building bearing Ronald Reagan's name, no events are planned until May to mark his 100th birthday. The Ronald Reagan Building and International Trade Center houses 7,000 federal employees, and private-sector tenants and an international trade center, which Nancy Reagan once called a fitting tribute to her husband's support for open markets and free trade. June the 5th, 2004," said Baker. "Yes, the revolution was about a man, but it was really much more."

Lee Greenwood sang his signature version of "God Bless the USA," and several others, including country artists Lonestar and Amy Grant, also performed.

Reagan, the nation's 40th chief executive, was 93 when he died after a long battle with Alzheimer's disease.

The event was the culmination of a week of tributes to the former president at and around his presidential library, including speeches from Cheney and Sarah Palin.

In Illinois, where Reagan was born and spent the first two decades of his life, hundreds celebrated at the Tampico Historical Society, eating cake and touring the restored apartment where he was born in 1911. (AP)

‘Kids for Cash’ Trial Set to Begin

Prosecutors: Scheme yielded Pa. judge $2.8M in kickbacks

Allentown, Pa.

Kids in Luzerne County had incentive to stay out of the courtroom of Mark Ciavarella, a fearsome, zero-tolerance judge who tossed youths into juvenile detention even when their crimes didn’t warrant it. Ciavarella ordered a 13-year-old boy to spend 48 days in a private jail for throwing steak at his mother’s boyfriend during an argument. A 10-year-old girl who accidentally set her house ablaze languished in the same jail, PA Child Care, for more than a month — forced to shower naked in front of male guards, she says, and prohibited from hugging her family during rare visits. PA Child Care’s beds were filled with young offenders who didn’t belong there, prosecutors allege, because its owner was paying kickbacks to Ciavarella. On Monday, the disgraced former judge will stand trial in one of the biggest courtroom scandals in U.S. history — a $2.8 million bribery scheme known as “kids for cash.”

Backstory

2009 and pleading guilty that February to honest services fraud and tax evasion in a deal that called for 87 months in prison, but the deals were rejected. A federal grand jury then returned a 48-count racketeering indictment against the two. Conahan pleaded guilty to one racketeering charge and awaits sentencing. (AP)

Court documents outline a scheme in which Michael Conahan, then Luzerne County’s president judge, forced the county-run juvenile detention center to close in 2002, and helped PA Child Care LLC, a company owned by his friend, secure contracts worth tens of millions of dollars to house youth offenders. Ciavarella, who presided over juvenile court, sent youths to PA Child Care and a sister facility while taking payments from the owner and the builder of the facilities, prosecutors said. Ciavarella has said he didn’t believe he was breaking the law. (AP)

Shooting at Frat Leaves 1 Dead, 11 Injured in Ohio

Youngstown, Ohio

Two men involved in a dispute at a fraternity house party left the house and then returned, firing shots into the crowd early Sunday and killing a Youngstown State University student and injuring 11 other people, a police chief said.

Youngstown police Chief Jimmy Hughes said the house just north of the Ohio campus had been bustling with 50 or more people, some as young as 17. Six of the injured were students, authorities said.

Investigators are trying to identify the shooters, and the people who were shot have told police they had no problems with the suspected shooters, Hughes said.

Members of the university-sanctioned Omega Psi Phi fraternity lived at the house, YSU spokesman Ron Cole said.

"This is one of those days that every university president across the country, as well as many other officials, always dread," university president Cynthia Anderson said at a news conference on campus.

The 11 injured were taken to nearby St. Elizabeth Health Center, and eight of them had been treated and released by early afternoon, hospital spokeswoman Tina Creighton said.

Anderson said she had been assured by police that there was no threat to the northeast Ohio campus. (AP)

Tahrir Square's Delicate Balance

Uncertain coexistence lingers between army, protesters in Egypt

Cairo

An awkward, uncertain coexistence between protesters and the Egyptian military is now playing out in Tahrir Square, where early hopes that soldiers were sympathetic to the demonstrators and might come over to their side have given way to increasing signs that the army just wants the people to go home.

For each of the past few days, the army has made its presence felt, by different, non-violent, means. And the object clearly seems to be to discourage the opposition forces who want to keep possession of the central plaza, the iconic center of the 13-day struggle for control of the Egyptian capital.

"The military doesn't want us here anymore," said Tamer Mustafa, 30, a teacher who was on the square Sunday. Officers, he said, have spoken with members of the crowd, telling them they're causing "fitna" — or division between Muslims, and that this is not good.

The demonstrators are aware that the army is the one institution in Egypt that commands universal respect and that could tip this struggle one way or the other. They are also aware that President Hosni Mubarak, who contin-

In Control

The Egyptian army's increasingly visible presence has clearly made the area around Tahrir Square much safer. The stone-throwing battles with protesters sympathetic to President Hosni Mubarak have stopped. Now, stones gathered as ammunition spell messages. One said: "We are the people of Facebook." But the military escalation also is a sign that the army is much more in control. It has set up checkpoints at every entrance to the square, and many tanks are arranged facing the protest. (TWP)

"They may not be with us, but we definitely don't want them against us," Mustafa said.

Tunisia's Ex-Ruling Party Halted

Interior minister suspends all activities amid serious protests

Tunis, Tunisia

Tunisia's interior minister on Sunday suspended all activities of the country's former ruling party amid the most serious protests since the country's autocratic president fled into exile less than a month ago.

which corruption spread. Should the RCD be dissolved, it would be among the most sweeping moves since Ben Ali's departure. (AP)

Backstory ...

The Democratic Constitutional Rally embodied the policies of former president Zine El Abidine Ben Ali, who fled into exile Jan. 14 after a month of nationwide anti-government protests. The party became a key instrument by which Ben Ali maintained power and by

The official TAP news agency, which carried the statement, said the measure was taken because of the "extreme urgency" of the situation, a reference to deadly weekend protests around Tunisia, and to "preserve the higher interests of the nation."

The announcement came hours after crowds pillaged, then burned a police station in the northwestern city of Kef a day after police fatally shot at least two demonstrators. It was the worst violence in Tunisia since Ben Ali fled to Saudi Arabia, ending 23 years in power. (AP)

Trial Opens in Iran For 3 U.S. Hikers

All enter not-guilty pleas on charges of spying; 1 is absent

Tehran, Iran

Two Americans accused of spying appeared in a closed-door Iranian court session Sunday to begin their trial after an 18-month detention that has brought impassioned family appeals, a stunning bail deal to free their companion and back-door diplomatic outreach by the U.S. through an Arab ally in the Gulf.

All three — two in person and one in absentia — entered not-guilty pleas during the five-hour hearing, said their lawyer, Masoud Shafiei. He described Shane Bauer and Josh Fattal as appearing in good health.

Shafiei added that he was barred by Iranian law from giving any further details of the proceedings. But he noted that the judge decided for at least one more session in Tehran Revolutionary Court, which deals with state security cases, includ-

Iran's Judiciary Clout

The trial for the three Americans highlights the power of Iran's judiciary, which is controlled directly by the nation's ruling clerics and has rejected apparent appeals by President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad to show some leniency. But Ahmadinejad has also tried to draw attention to Iranians in U.S. jails, raising the possibility the detainees have been viewed as potential bargaining chips with Washington at a time of high-stakes showdowns over Iran's nuclear program. Bauer's fiancée, Sarah Shourd, was released in September on $500,000 bail arranged through the Gulf nation of Oman, which maintains close ties to the West and Iran. She was ordered back to Tehran for the trial, and the bail will likely be forfeited because of her absence. NASSER KARIMI (AP)

Faster Friends

When President Obama got to the part of his State of the Union address when he called for 80 percent of Americans to have access to high-speed rail, I stood up, did a little dance and let out a joyous "Wooooo." No one in the House chamber seemed quite as excited — but, then, I'm not sure how many of them commute from Baltimore to D.C. every day.

I'm only in my sixth month of being in the train gang, and as I repeatedly assure my husband (whose job is the reason we moved), it really hasn't been that bad. I've memorized the MARC schedule, made a bunch of train friends and generally learned the rhythms of the ritual. But that doesn't mean it couldn't be better.

With high-speed rail between the two cities, what's now a 45-minute MARC trip — on one of the rare express trains — could be less than half that. Getting home would be no more daunting than traveling to Rockville. More Washington workers would feel free to take advantage of Baltimore's cheaper real estate prices, or just come by for a night of experimental music and free-flowing Natty Boh.

By Vicky Hallett

Sounds like a dream, right? Unfortunately, for now, it's about as realistic as one. Sure, there's Acela, which is technically high-speed rail, but that's a 35-minute trip that costs about $40 per ride. And although a Baltimore-Washington Maglev line seemed to be in the works a decade ago, the project has totally died. (You can see the plan on the site Bwmaglev.com — last updated in 2003.) Other American high-speed rail projects are on the drawing board, but none of them are anywhere near here.

So, for the foreseeable future, my Charm City compatriots and I will have to settle for MARC improvements, which actually seem to be in the pipeline. The new schedule, starting in March, reportedly will increase the number of trains each day. (Four more, according to the conductor I bugged for details.)

It's a small step toward the service objectives outlined in the MARC growth and investment plan, which has been set back due to lack of funding. But here are a few of the highlights: 15-minute headways during peak hours; 30-minute headways the rest of the time; late-night and weekend trains; and improved on-time reliability.

If any of that even comes close to happening, I'll definitely be doing more dancing.

25 Protesters Sleep In Lafayette Square

About two dozen protesters calling for Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak to step down spent the night in Washington's Lafayette Square near the White House. After protesters marched Saturday from the Egyptian Embassy to the White House, organizer Hossam Mansour of Springfield, Va., said about 25 people spent the night in Lafayette Square in solidarity with those protesting in Cairo's Tahrir Square. Mansour says organizers have a permit for two weeks, so they plan to protest again. (AP)

Outages Spark Generator Sales

Panicked residents buy power sources in wake of snow fallout

Potomac, Md.

For Arthur Bennett, blackouts now come with a soundtrack.

When last month's "thunder-snow" knocked out power in Bennett's Montgomery County neighborhood, the preindustrial hush inside his house — when even the refrigerator seemed to hold its breath — soon gave way to the two-stroke roar of engines up and down his block.

"As soon as the power goes out, the generators come on," said Bennett, a resident of the tree-filled, outage-prone village of Garrett Park.

"In the last couple of years, it's gotten to be like a bunch of lawn mowers running all night. It means I don't sleep very well."

Bennett, like many residents of Pepco's service area in Maryland and the District, has concluded that blackouts are likely to get even louder as the utility's fed-up customers turn increasingly to backup power.

According to retailers and electricians, home generator sales are booming in the area Pepco serves, especially since the company has been plagued by repeated, prolonged outages over the past few years. Portable generators sold out at several home stores after the latest storm, and installers report that sales of high-end whole-house units have skyrocketed.

Jim Holt of Gaithersburg's Holt Electrical said his sales of home generators have been climbing steadily and reached a near "level of panic" after the last blackout — mainly on Pepco's turf.

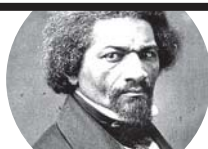

"We've got people begging us to come out right now, offering to pay extra," Holt said. "A few years ago, we had a lot of sales in McLean and Great Falls, places where they have a lot of trees. Now it's all Potomac, Bethesda, Silver Spring. That's Pepco." STEVE HENDRIX (THE WASHINGTON POST)

Va. Document Mill Is Busted

Sugarland, Va.

The Loudoun County Sheriff's Office has shut down a document mill that officials say may have provided hundreds of fraudulent forms of identification to illegal immigrants.

Sheriff Stephen Simpson announced Friday that four Salvadorans were taken into custody last month at a Sugarland home, where authorities found evidence of at least 500 fraudulent documents, including work visas and driver's licenses, and photographs of possible customers.

Authorities seized computers, two vehicles and more than $2,000 in cash. Three men were arrested and charged with manufacturing fraudulent documents.

Two had previously been deported, and the third had an expired temporary protective status. (AP)

Calculate the right amount of savings to retire comfortably

Chicago

Coming up with “your number” — the amount of money you will need to retire comfortably — is a preoccupation for many. Some financial services have encouraged the quest, most memorably ING in TV commercials showing baby boomers with bright orange numbers with dollar signs on their heads. The concept has gained urgency in recent years, especially after two market meltdowns that eroded retirement savings and confidence alike. But it may actually be counter-productive. Rather than a decades-long, potentially futile effort to reach a huge number, you may be better off setting achievable benchmarks along the way. That’s not to say that setting financial goals for retirement and trying to reach them isn’t important. Many people, after all, are on pace to run low on cash in retirement, which will leave them needing to rely on Social Security checks that average only about $1,100 a month. There’s a problem, though, with attaching a single, large number to your aspirations. Coming up with

The share of early baby boomers at risk of not having enough money to pay for basic expenditures and health care costs through 20 years of retirement. (AP) a reliable number for your retirement savings goal is tough enough. Reaching it might feel impossible. And that can be deflating. “Looking at a monster number and thinking, ‘I’m never going to get there,’ causes a lot of procrastination,” says Anne Arvia, senior vice president of retirement plans for Nationwide Financial. “It can be overwhelming.” One increasingly popular concept advocates setting a savings target that’s a multiple of current household income. It’s a more manageable way of staying on top of your progress toward retirement security. A simpler approach, advocated among others by Principal Financial, holds that the average investor should focus on saving 11 percent to 15 percent of pay over a 40-year career in order to be OK in retirement. If someone is close to retirement but far short of their number, they can still make “bite-sized moves,” says

Bob Sollmann, who heads the retirement business at MetLife. Those might include bumping up the portion of your paycheck that you save by 1 or 2 percent, or considering moving somewhere less expensive in retirement. “If a number is a way to motivate someone to get somewhere, that’s good,” he says. “But at the end of the day, it’s all about taking action.” DAVE CARPENTER (AP)

Focusing on amassing a huge, specific amount of savings by the time you retire can be daunting. Here are guidelines for financial adviser Charles Farrell's capital-to-income ratio, detailing how much savings you should have at five-year increments.

Cairo's traffic jams and bank lines give a surreal sense of normalcy amid crisis

Cairo

Egyptians desperate for cash lined up at newly reopened banks, and Cairo's infamous traffic jams reappeared Sunday as the capital struggled to regain a sense of normalcy after nearly two weeks of unrest.

But hulking battle tanks on the streets and nervous citizen watch groups manning barricades at night were vivid reminders that the crisis was far from over, with thousands of protesters still demanding the ouster of the president.

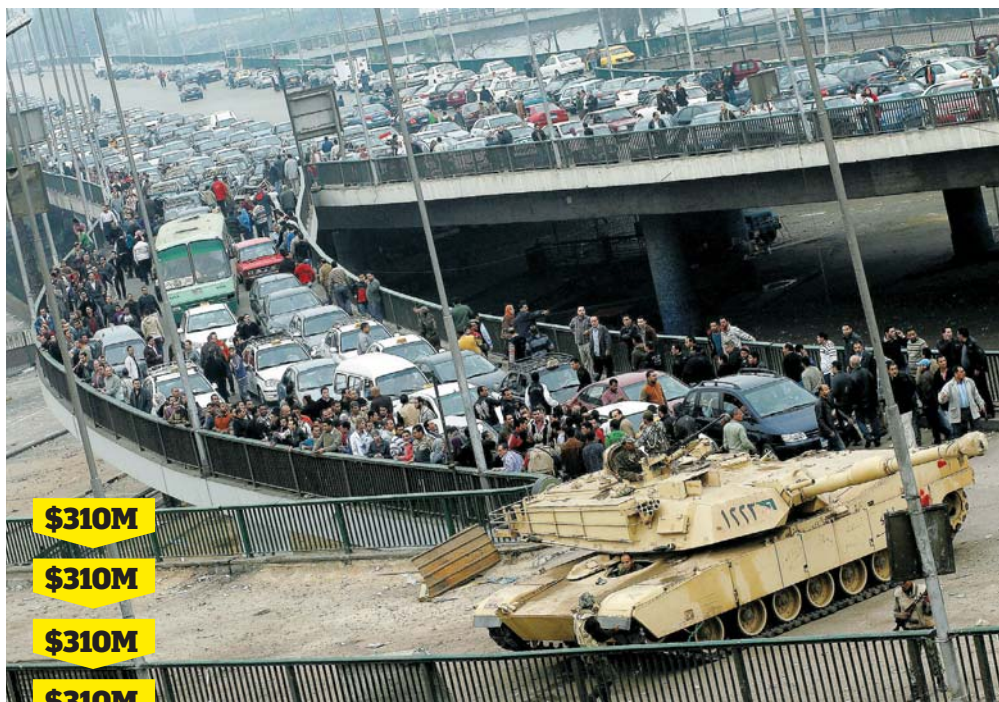

"It's much better than yesterday or the day before; ordinary people are back out walking around and, look, we even have a traffic jam," said Ahmed Mohammed, 65, the owner of a men's clothing store on Arab League Street, a major commercial thoroughfare.

Cairo, a city of 18 million people, slowed to a near standstill more than a week ago after widespread looting and street battles broke out in a near-total breakdown of security amid mass protests demanding the ouster of President Hosni Mubarak and police abandoned their posts.

Businesses closed, and traffic was largely absent as residents holed up at home and faced a curfew that at one point started at 3 p.m., choking off a city once renowned for never sleeping. The curfew start has since been relaxed to 7 p.m.

Most stores were open Sunday for the first time in days, although some were boarded up with signs saying they were "closed due to looting." Across the 12-lane divided road from Mohammed's store were the burnt-out remains of a police station and a duty-free shop.

Traffic also had returned to its normal sluggish rush-hour flow in many parts of the city, albeit with a dearth of traffic police.

The total cost, after 13 days, of the protests in Egypt. A report released Friday by the investment bank Credit Agricole estimated a daily cost of $310 million.

An Egyptian army tank blocks traffic on an overpass as anti-government protesters approach nearby off of Tahrir Square. Businesses opened on Sunday for the first time since the crisis.

"We want reform to continue but with a return to normal life," added Ahmed, echoing the sentiment of many across a city that still wants change, while desperately yearning for the end to the unrest. Many Egyptians have been unable to access their bank accounts, and ATMs rapidly emptied of cash or were attacked by looters. Employers said they couldn't pay end-of-the-month salaries, and food prices soared.

The government reopened a limited number of banks for three hours on Sunday, sparking a desperate rush for cash and long lines at the financial institutions. "There's a surreal feeling to all of this — almost like time stood still and we were trapped in a nightmare," Zakariya el-Fattah, a

Difficult Transition

President Hosni Mubarak's immediate resignation — the key demand of protesters in the streets of Cairo — would trigger snap presidential elections under the Egyptian constitution and could make political reform more difficult, experts say. If Mubarak were to resign now, elections would have to be held within 60 days, according to the constitution. The electoral rules impose many restrictions on who could run, heavily favoring the old regime, and could not be changed in the run-up to the vote, legal experts said. (AP)

Meanwhile ...

Egyptian Vice President Omar Suleiman reached out to the outlawed Muslim Brotherhood and other opposition groups Sunday as part of a new offer of sweeping concessions including press freedom and an eventual end to hated emergency laws that have been in place for decades, the latest attempt to try to calm an anti-government upheaval. But the youthful protesters filling Cairo's main square said they were not represented and were united in rejecting any form of negotiations until President Hosni Mubarak steps down, raising questions about whether a rift might be developing. (AP)

The Egyptian stock market will remain closed until at least Wednesday, with an announcement about its reopening to be issued 48 hours in advance. Officials said the exchange would clarify on Monday what changes could take place, including a shorter session and a cap on any steep drops after the 17 percent plunge that prompted its closing on Jan. 26, a day after the protests began.

Businessman Ayman Abdel-Baqi said most people were still uneasy about the situation and feared a return of the chaos that left stores across the city gutted. "It's not normal yet; merchants are afraid to stock up their stores with goods. They're keeping them in the warehouse because the looters might return. There is no confidence yet that the situation is stable," he said from his print shop on the busy street leading to the pyramids. PAUL SCHEMM AND TAREK EL-TABLAU (AP)

Super Sunday for Caps

Fighting-mad rivals trade blows again in Washington shutout

The Capitals

The goalie who got dissed turned shaky into a shutout.

Alex Ovechkin took a hit to the knee so nasty he wasn't penalized when he retaliated with a punch to the face.

That was just a taste of the animosity from the Washington Capitals' 3-0 win over the Pittsburgh Penguins, two rivals who put on a Super Sunday show for the second-straight year and again left no doubt they wouldn't be hanging out together afterward to watch the NFL's big game.

"They don't like us. We don't like them," Washington coach Bruce Boudreau said. "That's the way it should be."

Boudreau was particularly feisty after the Capitals' eighth-straight Super Bowl matinee win, a game in which David Steckel was targeted because of a hit on Sidney Crosby on New Year's Day. Washington snapped the five-game winning streak of the star-starved Penguins, who are dealing with a likely season-ending knee injury to Evgeni Malkin and are awaiting Sidney Crosby's return from a concussion.

Michal Neuvirth, who was called "shaky" by Pittsburgh coach Dan Bylsma during the HBO series that shadowed these two teams during the build-up to the Winter Classic, made 22 saves for his second career shutout. Neuvirth got his first start since Jan. 18 because expected starter Semyon Varlamov was feeling ill. The young Czech wasn't short on motivation.

"Before the game, I remembered when he said that," Neuvirth said, "and I kind of looked at him during the warm-up and told myself that I got to shut these guys out tonight."

Brooks Laich scored a blue-collar goal in the first period, Marcus Johansson got a flashy short-handed one in the second period, and Mike Knuble added an empty-netter in the third for the Capitals, who picked up some needed momentum with their second solid win a row, following the 5-2 win over Tampa Bay on Friday that snapped a three-game losing streak. JOSEPH WHITE (AP)

Head Shot

Late in the first period, a slap shot by Pittsburgh's Brooks Orpik struck Mike Green in the right side of his head, and the Capitals' defenseman did not return during Sunday's game — a 3-0 Washington victory.

Green crumpled to the ice after being hit by the puck and looked dazed as Washington's head athletic trainer, Greg Smith, tended to him and then helped the All-Star off the ice. (TWP)

Malkin Out

The Penguins aren't planning to have Evgeni Malkin back this season. Coach Dan Bylsma nodded his head "yes" Sunday when asked whether he was preparing as if the injured All-Star center won't return until the fall. Malkin tore the ACL and MCL in his right knee Friday night in Buffalo. (AP)

Out a Gig: Washington Capitals play-by-play announcer Joe Beninati got some bad news Sunday when Versus gave him the ax from its national hockey coverage. The move is a result of Comcast's recent merger with NBC. Softening the blow, though, is that Beninati's status with Comcast SportsNet — where he calls the Caps games with Craig Laughlin — is unaffected. He's been covering the Caps since 1994. (EXPRESS)

NFL Set to Enter the Great Unknown

Imminent labor war likely to dominate league's offseason

Pro Football

By far, football is America's favorite sport. Yet despite that, when they turn out the lights after Sunday's Super Bowl between the Green Bay Packers and Pittsburgh Steelers, the party could be over.

A labor war that pits rich athletes against richer owners could shut down the game for who knows how long. The collective bargaining agreement that led to unprecedented success for the NFL expires at the end of the day on March 3, and barring an agreement before then, owners are threatening to lock out players.

They are pondering the unthinkable: The first play stoppage since 1987. The shutdown of the only form of entertainment that, as the sky-high TV ratings this year have shown, consistently brings people together in a tweeting, texting, TiVo-ing country where viewing habits get more fragmented by the day.

"For a sport at the height of its popularity to self-destruct by lacking the will and creativity to solve economic problems would be the height of folly," agent Leigh Steinberg said. "Who wants to be the person to kill this golden goose?"

To hear the two sides tell it,

Super Bowl Results

Sunday's Super Bowl between the Packers and the Steelers ended after Express' deadline. For results, plus analysis from Mike Wise | washingtonpost.com/sports they're trying to make it better, not kill it. But they are far apart on how to get that done.

Owners say it's time to pocket more money for a league that hasn't started a stadium project in more than five years. They want a bigger slice of the roughly $9 billion in revenue, a rookie wage scale and to increase the regular season by two games, to 18.

The players think those two extra games will cause an exponential rise in injuries and don't want to give back any percentage of the revenue pool, a massive slice of which comes from the networks, which combine to pay about $4 billion per year to televise the NFL.

Commissioner Roger Goodell has said both sides are preparing for any outcome, but "the commitment on behalf of ownership is to get an agreement."

He reiterated that Sunday in an interview on Fox, saying a negotiating session between the owners and players the day before was "beneficial." EDDIE PELLIS (AP)

Booze Clues

Got (Fake) Milk?

Since Four Loko was cruelly decaffeinated, I've been on the hunt for another novelty alcohol-based product to make fun of.

In the name of research, I tried Chocovine ($14 for a 750-ml bottle) — “a fine French Cabernet subtly combined with a rich dark chocolate from Holland,” according to Chocovine.com.

Then I decided to move up to the more straightforwardly named Adult Chocolate Milk ($24 for a liter, Adultchocolatemilk.com), a 40-proof vodka beverage that resembles milk and comes in a retro glass bottle, but, suspiciously, requires no refrigeration.

The taste? It's like drinking Ovaltine while being repeatedly punched in the temple. By that, I mean, it's pretty good. The liquor it most closely resembles is Baileys Irish Cream — and, like Baileys, it's the kind of stuff you probably drank way back before you knew how to tell what was worth drinking.

Why does our society feel the need to disguise alcohol as other types of refreshment? In addition to the chocolate milk, we've seen booze hiding behind energy drinks and even whipped cream (such as CREAM, Givemecream.com). The Adult Bev. Co., which produces Adult Chocolate Milk, is developing alcoholic orange cream soda and limeade, too.

At least anyone worried that strangers will judge their taste in beer, wine or bourbon can just sip spiked chocolate milk and not worry about being judged. You're drinking it ironically. It's the new PBR.

STRAIGHT SHOOTER

Timothy Olyphant corners the market on Stetson-wearing men of the law

Television

Remember the sure-footed, fearless and righteous sheriff on HBO's “Deadwood”? He was played by Timothy Olyphant.

The sure-footed, fearless and righteous sheriff who attempted to maintain calm during a viral outbreak in last year's horror remake “The Crazies”? Also played by Timothy Olyphant.

And what about the sure-footed, fearless and (mostly) righteous U.S. marshal who anchors the FX series “Justified” (Wed., 10 p.m.)? That guy — otherwise known as Raylan Givens, a Harlan County, Ky., native with a quick draw, a sexy drawl and an affection for ten-gallon hats — also stars Timothy Olyphant.

Undeniably, there's just something about his furrowed brow and twinkling eyes that demand to be framed by the wide brim of a Stetson. But what is it?

“I hate to tell you — I have not a clue,” Olyphant says. “Part of me thinks that you do it once and it works, so people say, ‘We'll get him; that works.’”

Calling His Shots

Timothy Olyphant doesn't just star on “Justified”;

he's a producer too, allowing him to work with the writers. “He has a lot of notes, and most of them are really spot-on,” says executive producer Graham Yost. “And I, frankly, kind of curse and say, ‘God, we should have thought of that.’” That process is immensely satisfying to Olyphant, even if part of him wonders how the other members of the “Justified” team sometimes feel about his suggestions: “For all I know, there's some people in back rooms going, ‘Who the [expletive] made this guy a producer?’” (TWP)

Intentionally or not, Olyphant, 42, has taken the man-of-the-law trope to a career high with his portrayal of Givens, who's based on a character created by Elmore Leonard.

“If you take away the hat, I think there are a lot of differences between this role and the ones I've played before,” Olyphant says.

“Part of me thinks that you do it once and it works, so people say, ‘We'll get him; that works.’”

“What's fun about the character is the ease and the charm and the sort of old-fashionedness of the guy. And yet in the same breath, he's able to just smack somebody in the face, or hit him with the back of a rifle, for just being rude.”

Graham Yost, executive producer of “Justified,” said it's just that mix of menace and charm that made Olyphant such a natural choice: “There was that feeling the first day on the set that, ‘Oh, yeah, this is the part — or this is one of the parts — he was born to play.’” JEN CHANEY (THE WASHINGTON POST)

Respect Your Mistakes

Kathryn Schulz sees your stupid errors as teachable moments

Author Q&A

If you find a typo in "Being Wrong: Adventures in the Margin of Error" ($27, Ecco), expect a gracious reply from author Kathryn Schulz. "When you write a book about being wrong, you're professionally obligated to not get defensive," Schulz says.

In "Being Wrong," she explains why we make mistakes and encourages us to accept them. (And we mean blunders of the poorly-phrased-suggestion-that-Mom-lose-some-weight variety, not the amputating-the-wrong-leg-during-surgery sort.) The ability to calmly back away from our missteps could even make our world a better place. Hear her dispense wisdom on Monday at Politics and Prose.

What do we want to be right about the most?

We actually tend to really want to be right even about totally trivial

Self-Help

A Guide to Appropriate Apologies

We put together this list of follow-ups for all your mistake-making needs.

Level One: You tell what you thought was an awesome joke about beef to someone you didn't know was a vegan, then feel like a total jerk.

Appropriate apology: "That was insensitive of me."

Level Two: Stepped on someone's foot on the Metro. They were wearing sneakers, you were wearing loafers, so no harm done. Appropriate apology: "Oh, whoops! My bad."

Level Three: Forgot a friend's birthday. Appropriate apology: A phone call, followed by in-person delivery of homemade cupcakes.

Level Four: Sent an e-mail in which you complained about your boss to your boss. Appropriate apology: Honest admittance of mistake, followed by compliment about boss's perfume, which is not overwhelming at all and smells nothing like cat pee. You don't even know why you wrote that.

Level Five: Caused breakdown of national financial system. Appropriate apology: None. Accept government bailout. KRISTEN PAGE-KIRBY (EXPRESS)

ial things. You would think the higher the stakes get, the more we care about being right, and to some extent that's true. But I found that people would tell me stories about getting into these escalating conflicts over really trivial issues. I use in the book this funny situation in Grand Central Terminal, where I overheard a couple fighting about whether the woman had asked for a slice of pound cake.

Does our desire to be right vary by profession? You're speaking in D.C., where politicians can't really afford to be wrong.

If you talk to scientists, to entrepreneurs, to people in the financial world, artists, doctors, you get these unbelievably different ideas and feelings about error. To be perfectly honest, I can't actually think of a professional subculture that has a more dysfunctional relationship to wrongness than politicians, and that's not their fault as individual beings. It's a subculture that makes it impossible to handle error gracefully.

"We actually tend to really want to be right even about totally trivial things."

What do you think is the best part of being wrong?

There are some kinds of mistakes that are very disastrous. I would never want to say, "mistakes are great for the following X reasons." But the experience of being wrong, to me, is a fundamentally exciting experience. As hard as it can be in the moment, as confusing, as disorienting, it is one of those rare opportunities in life to totally revise our understanding of the world and deeply learn something new, to have the world shift in front of you. That can be really magical. ROXANA HADADI

Know the Score

The New York Philharmonic has started placing its vast archives on the Internet in a multi-year undertaking that will total 8 million pages at completion.

The orchestra launched the digital archive on Thursday with 300,000 pages from music director Leonard Bernstein's tenure, from 1943 to 1970. They include more than 1,000 conducting scores marked by Bernstein, Andre Kostelanetz, Dimitri Mitropoulos and Gustav Mahler. There's also more than 3,200 printed programs, 4,500 lantern slides and selected business records, including Bernstein's programming proposals and correspondence.

By 2012, 1.3 million pages from the Bernstein years will be online. They will be followed by documents from 1842, the year the Philharmonic was founded, to 1908, and from 1909 to 1943. The digital archive is paid for by a $2.4 million grant from the Leon Levy Foundation. (AP)

1 Our Families, Ourselves

No one can love you the way a family member can, and maybe no one can photograph you the way a family member can either. "Close to Home," a collection of images at the Smithsonian American Art Museum, suggests that a spouse, parent or sibling who is a photographer can capture some surprisingly intimate moments. Smithsonian American Art Museum, 8th and F streets NW; through July 24, free; 202-633-1000, Americanart.si.edu. Are you a secret agent who seduced someone to obtain information? And are you wondering how to break the news? There's not really a way to say it with flowers, but you could bring your significant other to a lecture on "Sex(pionage)" that delves into the racy side of the intelligence business. 3 You Got Some Stabbin' to Do Normally, we'd like to have the words "dinner" and "murder" spaced as far apart as possible in any given paragraph, but this is necessary to describe "Lucy ... I'm Dead," a dinner party at Rams Head that doubles as a you-solve-it mystery (and (for some reason) an homage to Lucille Ball and Desi Arnaz — yes, involved in a murder. Rams Head, 33 West Street, Annapolis; 6:30 p.m., $48; 410-268-4545, Ramsheadtavern.com.

Disney's Own 'Rocket Man'

Elton John provides the soundtrack for
'Gnomeo & Juliet'

Film

Elton John was an internationally successful pop singer-songwriter when he got a phone call out of the blue from lyricist Tim Rice, inviting him to write some songs for an animated movie featuring singing animals. That was nearly 20 years ago, and the result was 1994's "The Lion King," which subsequently became a hit Broadway show.

"In 1990, if you'd have said in 1993 I'd be writing a song about a warthog, I'd have said you're out of your mind," John says.

A generation later, John has

"['Gnomeo & Juliet'] is a story ... saying we should all get along."

reteamed with Disney for another family-oriented animated project. "Gnomeo & Juliet" is a music-filled action adventure about warring families of garden gnomes and a forbidden romance. The Shakespeare takeoff has a decidedly more upbeat ending than the original, though.

Blue gnome Gnomeo and gnome Juliet meet outside their walls one night, and can't help but develop a mutual fondness for each other. They try to keep their forbidden friendship secret but, inevitably, are discovered by their clans, setting off a chain of events that threatens to destroy both gardens.

"This is a story line saying we should all get along if we're Protestant or Catholic, Muslim or Jewish, Democrat or Republican," John says.

"Gnomeo & Juliet" showcases classic pop songs John co-wrote with Bernie Taupin in the 1970s and 1980s, including "Rocket Man (I Think It's Going to Be a Long Long Time)." Additionally, the songwriting partners of more than 40 years wrote two new songs, "Hello Hello" and "Love Builds a Garden" for the film.

"I'm a team player," says John, who also composed the music for "Billy Elliot: The Musical." "That's why I like doing musicals. What you learn most of all is to leave your ego at the door." ANGELA DAWSON (ENTERTAINMENT NEWS WIRE)

"If Dan Snyder had as much passion for the Redskins as he does his own self-image, the team might actually have a chance of being good again."

Horoscope

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)

Your motives will be true at all times, and when it is necessary to make things clear, you will want to do so. Avoid misunderstanding.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)

You may be doubted by some, but the support you receive by others will be just what you need to bring a current project to fruition.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)

You've been thinking a great deal about work and other responsibilities, but you may want to let it all go and enjoy yourself trivially.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)

You'll be drawn to that which others shun — not so much to be different but because that sort of thing truly interests you.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)

You may find yourself counting the hours before you get the green light to do something that may be somewhat controversial.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)

You're likely to see an idea take shape that can change the course of your professional life if you let it. But is that what you want?

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)

Despite the influences you are feeling at this time, don't forget that you are still in charge of your own actions — and the results they yield.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)

You'll see yourself as others see you, if only temporarily. This can prove a valuable gift, and the effects may be long-lasting.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)

You can maximize your rewards simply by remaining true to your desires; don't settle for less than you honestly feel you deserve.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)

Those working with you will enjoy the same thrill when met with success as you will — and you'll want to give them all due credit.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)

Certain rules may seem to thwart progress at this time, but you may not have what it takes to break them in favor of your own methods — yet.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)

You can win over the critics, but remember that their support is only as lasting as your current success. They may turn again.

MISUNDERSTANDING*Meanwhile, Courtney Still Waiting for a Refund After Her Purchase Withered and Died

Courtney Love is being sued by florist My Secret Garden for not paying a $4,000 bill for flower arrangements in 2009, TMZ.com reported. The owners say they've sent Love multiple invoices and have gotten no response. While we aren't sure whether this is the same My Secret Garden, the one at Mysecretgardenla.com offers an arrangement named "The Courtney Love" for $125. (EXPRESS)

INNOCENCEAttorney Does the Obvious

Lindsay Lohan's attorney said Saturday that her client did not steal a $2,500 necklace and would fight any charges. The statement from Shawn Chapman Holley was the first official word from the actress' camp since police revealed they were investigating her for grand theft. "We vehemently deny these allegations and, if charges are filed, we will fight them in court, not in the press," Holley said. (AP)

PROPHECY*No Matter How Rich You Get, Other Boys Will Always Make Fun of Your Name

Shia LaBeouf was handcuffed briefly and released by police early Saturday after fighting outside Mad Bull's Tavern in Sherman Oaks, Calif. Witnesses told Usmagazine.com that LaBeouf was taunted and punched by patrons who fled before police arrived. "It was just boys being boys. Things got really out of hand, and it didn't have to go down the way it did," said bar owner Richard DiSisto. (EXPRESS)

"It's like Michael Jordan. There's only so long you can keep winning them rings. There's only so long you can rule the reality world."

— THE SITUATION TELLS E! NEWS WHY HE'LL HAVE TO EVENTUALLY LEAVE "JERSEY SHORE." HE ALSO SAID, "HOPEFULLY, BY THE END OF THE YEAR, I'LL BE IN A MOVIE."

CRAZY DUBAI ATTRACTIONSDolphinariums, Indoor Skiing, Man-Made Islands, Skyscrapers, Kevin Spacey

Kevin Spacey is hoping to foster talent in the Middle East with a theater arts academy in Dubai, United Arab Emirates. The joint venture by the Kevin Spacey Foundation and a group led by an Emirati tycoon plans to offer workshops and classes. The mission seeks to bring Mideast content to international venues such as Broadway. (AP)

VictimsType 'milk aholic low an' and Enjoy

E*TRADE, sued by Lindsay Lohan for a commercial in which a baby named Lindsay is called a "milkaholic," bans both words in the "BabyMail" site (Etradebaby-mail.com), Radaronline.com noticed. Enter a message for the baby to speak; if it contains profanity or the words "Lindsay," "Lindsey," "Lohan" or "milkaholic," it will be rejected. (EXPRESS)

Would you take a 6-week challenge to change your love-life?

The Relationship Course

6 Weeks to Transform Your Love-life:

Relationship issues are no news. However, problems like: lack of communication/affection, financial stress, sexual issues, infidelity, and other serious issues seem to intensify as days go by.

Many people are falling into bad relationships, resulting in waste of time, lack of trust, and, often times, traumatic experiences. Court rooms are overloaded with disputes due to bad relationships. Are these enough reasons for you to join The Relationship Course?

You will be surprised to see how God provides a solid ground and down-to-earth instructions for a happy and blessed relationship.

The Relationship Course has helped thousands of people regain control of their relationship and restore their lives. In a period of 6 Sundays, singles can learn important criteria for choosing the right partner and married couples can resolve tough issues that even years of marriage counseling could not change.

This event aims to equip you with crucial information to succeed in your relationship and have a better perspective on your marriage, empowering you and your spouse to have a better future together.

Whether you are married, engaged or single, The Relationship Course will also help you heal from past disappointments and create a new path to a lasting and harmonious relationship.

It Helped US...

"This course didn't just give me a theory, it gave me practical advice which has resulted in a happy marriage. It's like being in my honeymoon all over again..." Donald Houser
